WHY A SPECIAL SESSION ON CHILDREN?

The reality of life today for the world’s children is that:

• More than 10 million under the age of five die each year, mostly from preventable disease and malnutrition;
• One third fail to complete five years of basic schooling;
• Over 100 million of primary school age, the majority of them girls, are not enrolled in school;
• Over 300,000 have been recruited as participants in recent armed conflicts;
• Over 60 million work in the worst forms of child labour.

For these and other reasons, the 189-member General Assembly, the highest policy-making body of the United Nations, has convened a Special Session on Children. It is scheduled to take place in New York, 19-21 September 2001.

The Special Session will be a follow-up to the historic World Summit for Children in New York in 1990. Building upon the progress made since that Summit, the Special Session will further promote, protect and ensure the rights of children worldwide.

The Summit, which was attended by 71 Heads of State and Government, adopted a World Declaration on Survival, Protection and Development of Children and also a Plan of Action to achieve a set of precise time-bound goals.

A major event of profound significance to children took place in 1989, the year before the World Summit: the adoption by the General Assembly of the landmark UN Convention on the Rights of the Child.

Ushering in a new era, the Convention created a momentum that helped move children and child rights to the top of the world’s political agenda ensuring a commitment by the international community to respect, fulfill, promote and protect the rights of children worldwide.

Ambassador Patricia Durrant of Jamaica, Chairperson of the Preparatory Committee for the Special Session, says the purpose of the Special Session is for leaders to commit to new actions for children.

According to her, during the last 10 years substantial progress has been made in fulfilling the goals and objectives of the World Summit for Children. “However much still remains to be done”.

The new commitments will be reflected in a forward-looking outcome document to be adopted at the Special Session.

WHAT THE SPECIAL SESSION HOPES TO ACCOMPLISH

The Special Session has two major objectives:

• A review of the progress made in the decade since the World Summit for Children.

The end-of-decade review combines national, regional and global reports on the status of children. These reviews will chart the achievements of the last decade and provide a progress report to world leaders as they plan future actions on children.

So far, over 130 national reports have been prepared by UN member states, along with those from UN agencies, on the implementation of the World Summit Plan of Action.

UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan will submit a report to the General Assembly which will spell out the progress made since the World Summit.

This report will be submitted to the Third Session of the Preparatory Committee (June 11-15) as a companion to the draft outcome document.

• A renewed commitment and a pledge for specific actions for the new decade.

The Special Session will adopt a global agenda for children with a set of specific goals and a plan of action for the new decade.

The upcoming Third Preparatory Committee meeting will finalize the draft outcome document before it is submitted to the Special Session for adoption.

As of mid-April, over 25 Heads of State and Government have indicated they will attend the Special Session, and the number is expected to increase.

Heads of State and Government have assigned 50 Personal Representatives to the Preparatory Committee meetings (see photo above). They include ministers, parliamentarians, senior policy specialists, and heads of non-governmental organizations (NGOs).

Besides the variety of national and regional meetings (see calendar, p. 4), the national reports on the implementation of the 1990 Plan of Action are a key component of the process because they will be articulating a new global agenda for children.

THE 10 IMPERATIVES FOR CHILDREN

The current draft outcome document calls on all members of society to uphold the following principles:

- Put children first. In all our undertakings, the best interests of the child shall always be our primary consideration.
- Leave no child behind. Because every girl and boy is born free and equal in dignity and rights, all forms of discrimination affecting children must end.
- Care for every child. The survival and development of children is the essential foundation of human development. No effort should be spared to ensure that children get the best possible start in life.
- Educate every child. All girls and boys must receive a compulsory, free basic education of good quality.
- Stop harming and exploiting children. Any acts of violence, exploitation and abuse against children are intolerable and must come to an end.
- Protect children from war. Children must be protected from the horrors of armed conflict.
- Combat HIV/AIDS. Children and their families must be protected from the devastating impact of HIV/AIDS.
- Fight poverty: invest in children. We reaffirm our vow to break the cycle of poverty within a single generation, united in the conviction that poverty reduction must begin with children and the realization of their rights.
- Listen to children. We regard children as resourceful citizens capable of helping to build a better future for all. We must respect their rights to express themselves and to participate in decisions that affect them.
- Protect the Earth for children. We must preserve our planet in order to nurture our children; equally, we must nurture our children if we are to preserve our planet.

YOUNG PEOPLE: THE VOICE OF THE SPECIAL SESSION

The General Assembly has recognized as essential the participation of children and adolescents in the Special Session and the process leading to it.

Governments and NGOs have been urged to include young people in their delegations to regional consultations, to the Preparatory Committee, and to the Special Session itself.

They have also been strongly encouraged to involve young people in the local, national and regional reviews of the implementation of the 1990 Plan of Action and on discussions on the draft outcome of the Special Session.

In order to promote the meaningful participation of young people from around the world, UNICEF has established a website called “Voices of Youth” (http://www.unicef.org/voy) as an interactive page where comments on youth-related topics for the Special Session are shared with key decision-makers.
The General Assembly has underlined the importance of active NGO participation both at the Special Session and in the preparatory process leading to it.

Along with young people, NGOs have been encouraged to organize activities in countries and local communities in preparation for, or to coincide with, the Special Session.

Both at the national and regional levels, NGOs have continued to sustain a timely dialogue with their respective governments in order to prepare national positions at global meetings.

A number of regional and country-level meetings are currently underway to mobilize NGOs for, and beyond, the Special Session in an ongoing global process to promote children’s rights.

Efforts are also underway to arrange video and radio link-ups during the Special Session so that civil society and young people can join in the discussions in New York from their respective countries.

PARTICIPATION IN MEETINGS AT THE UNITED NATIONS

Over 3,600 NGOs have been approved by the Preparatory Committee for accreditation to the Special Session and its preparatory process. The approval of NGO accreditation is now past deadline.

To ensure their active participation, NGOs will be permitted to intervene at the Preparatory Committee meetings and also at the Special Session, through their accredited representatives.

During the Second Session of the Preparatory Committee on 29 January - 2 February 2001, several NGOs organized caucuses to address critical issues such as girls’ education, child health and nutrition, global environment, child disability, children in armed conflict and child sexual exploitation. The Child Rights Caucus, comprising over 70 international and national organisations, provided a forum to discuss the draft outcome of the Special Session and prepared an alternative text (available at the Child Rights Information Network web site: http://www.crin.org)

GLOBAL MOVEMENT FOR CHILDREN

Preparations for the Special Session are serving to strengthen partnerships for children that will continue in the growing Global Movement for Children.

The GMC is a call to leadership and accountability at every level of society—governments, private sector, media, NGOs, religious and community leaders, and households—to ensure that every child is free to grow to adulthood in health, peace and dignity.

Consensus was reached on the ten imperatives of the Rallying Call for the Global Movement for Children, around which action should be mobilised at all levels. It was launched in February 2001 by six organizations - the Bangladesh Rural Advancement Committee (BRAC), Plan International, Save the Children Alliance, World Vision International, the Netaid.org Foundation and UNICEF.

Through the “Say Yes for Children” campaign, children and adults from around the world will speak out on these ten imperative actions by pledging their support to the Rallying Call.

The results of the campaign will be presented in September 2001 at the Special Session on Children. The Global Movement will then take the message of the Special Session to the world. To get involved in the GMC visit the web sites http://gmfc.org and http://www.unicef.org/gmfc

Nobel Peace Prize laureates meet, stress children’s rights. Former South African President Nelson Mandela and President Kim Dae-Jung of the Republic of Korea met in Seoul in March to discuss ways to promote peace, poverty eradication, democracy and human rights. Calling attention to children’s rights, they emphasized “the vital importance to protect children and youth from disease and abuse and to guarantee their rights for a fuller education.” They urged support for the forthcoming Special Session on Children.
